AGRIHOODS—AN IDEAL RETIREMENT COMMUNITY FOR A HEALTHY LIFESTYLE

By Anna DeSimone

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the year 2030 marks a demographic turning point for the United States when one in five Americans will be at retirement age. Over the next decade, the population of people over the age of 65 will grow by an astounding 11.1 million, according to the 2018 Household Projections report by Harvard University's Joint Center for Housing Studies (JCHS). Under these assumptions, aging baby boomers will add some 8.4 million households that are either single persons or married couples without children living at home.

Many of these 8 million households are expected to relocate or downsize. The opportunity to enjoy a healthy lifestyle is a strong priority for many "over-55" homebuyers. Enter the agrihood, a healthy lifestyle community centered around a working farm. Often situated on heritage farmland or
